Entertaining New Book By Two Carmel Authors

Particularly happy is the title of the new MacGowan-Newberry book just off the press. "Shaken Down" is the title. Naturally anyone who went through the big disaster in San Francisco in 1906, as Perry Newberry did, knows just about how many varieties of shake-down functioned about that time. First, of course, there was the earthquake and the fire; then the public official got officious, the public service corporations got hungry for more, and blackmailers and kidnapers plied their trade.

It is with the last-named gentry that "Shake Down" deals. Jerry Boyne, wise detective, as in "The Million-Dollar Suit Case," is an important cog in the wheel of love, romance and crime evolved by our Carmel black and white entertainers.

Some New Books and Some Old Ones

The Woodside Library is keeping true to its promise of adding, each month, some of the most important of the new publications to its shelves. During February, the following books were purchased:

Impressions and Comments, by Havell Ellis.

Trimble, by Lawrence Housman.

Segelfoss Town, by Knut Hamsun.

In the Land of Youth, by James Stephens.

Sard Harker, by John Maschfield.

Young Mischief, by Hugh de Selincourt.

Pipers and a Dancer, by Stella Benson.

The Divine Lady, by E. Barrington.

There have also been received a number of books which will be welcomed by those who missed them when they were first published. Among these are the following:

Memoirs of a Midget, by Walter de la Mare.

Stephen Crane, by Thomas Beer.

Pointed Roofs, by Dorothy Richardson.

Gates of Life, by Edwin Bjorkman.

Sembar, by Gilbert Cannon.

The Crock of Gold, by James Stephens.

The Strangers' Wedding, by W. L. George.

The Dark Mother, by Waldo Frank.

Some of the plays lately added to the drama shelf are:

The Shadow of the Glen, by J. M. Synge.

Saint Joan, by Bernard Shaw.

Cyrano de Bergerac, by Edmond Rostand.

Outward Bound, by Sutton Vane.

Too Much Money, by Israel Zangwill.

According to a bulletin just received from the University of California, Monterey Union High School is placed in Class A among the accredited high schools of the State.

There are very few schools in the State, not excepting the large city schools that number their attendance in the thousands, that have such a record.

PLANT A TREE

John B. Jordan and his son Jack have left on an auto trip which will take them to Albuquerque and Santa Fe, New Mexico, and to Mexico City, Old Mexico. Mr. Jordan's trip to these cities is for the purpose of getting a line on the architectural atmosphere of the Spanish period, with a view toward rebuilding Pine Inn along those lines.

REFORESTIZATION A VERY VITAL LOCAL PROBLEM

With all the talk about removing dead and infected trees in this city, which no doubt is more or less imperative, some thought should at once be given to a general plan to plant more trees.

If Carmel is to continue to possess one of its most alluring charms—that of the proximity of the trees to the ocean—it will be necessary to plant trees, not only on private property, but on public property also.

There are expert tree men in Carmel and vicinity whose advice and services are available.

There must be no delay.

Some Common Enemies of the Monterey Pine

By Fremont D. Ballou

Our Monterey pine and its near relative, the Bishop pine, are subject to attack by a dozen or more enemies in addition to the two described in the previous issues of the Pine Cone. Fortunately, most of these pests are sufficiently abundant as to cause any serious damage. A few of them, however, may be quite troublesome in certain areas, and while not calling for municipal action in their control, might necessitate individual efforts to save certain highly prized trees.

Two of the most troublesome of these enemies are plant parasites. One of these, a fungus, Cronartium Cerebrum, causes large, spherical, rough galls on limbs and trunks, often surrounding the part affected. Spores are produced which are readily carried from an infected to an uninfected tree, where they germinate if conditions are suitable. Where these galls occur on the main trunk of a young tree, it would be best to replace the tree by a healthy specimen, as the infected one will be stunted and soon die. No trees harboring the fungus on the trunk should be planted. If the gall is on a side limb, it should be removed and burned.

Like the preceding, the pine mistletoe (Razoumofskyia Occidentalis) is most troublesome on young trees, and those harboring should not be planted or if infected after planting, should be replaced by healthy trees. The swellings produced by this parasite are more elongated than those produced by Cronartium Cerebrum. The mistletoe produces seeds which, when ripe, are shot out into the air with great force, and their sticky coat enables them to adhere to whatever they hit. If their good fortune enables them to alight on a pine limb, they may germinate and begin sucking sap from their victim, which is weakened as a result.

The dark colored, hairy caterpillar to be seen at this season feeding on the tip needles, is the larva of a moth. It is fairly well controlled by its natural enemies, but where very troublesome in defoliating young trees, may be controlled by spraying with an arsenical spray.

The Pine Sawfly has been reported by Mr. H. E. Burke of the U. S. Forestry Service as defoliating certain pines in the Del Monte forest, but has not been seen in Carmel.

Another pest which works on the needles is a parasitic fly (Diplosis pini-radiatae). The needles are shortened and deformed by the larva, which lives at their base. No control has been worked out for this insect.

Among other pine parasites noted here this month by the writer were the spittle bug, which lives on the needles, surrounded by a mass of froth; a sucking bug, Chermes, whose presence on the needles is indicated by cottony tufts, and a tip borer. Fortunately none of these were sufficiently numerous or troublesome to call for treatment, however.

Three of our peninsula artists have returned from their wanderings. For two weeks Arthur J. Hammond, A. E. Kingsbury and Myron A. Oliver have been on a sketching tour, stopping at Santa Barbara, Laguna Beach and Red Rock Canyon. Later we shall see what they got.

City's New Zoning Ordinance Adopted

Our city trustees again sat around the council table last Monday night. Trustee W. T. Kibbler was in the chair. At his right sat Trustees Parkes and Dennis; at his left, Trustees Goold and Larouette. And the faithful city clerk faced the chairman.

Following the reading of several communications were read asking that the proposed zoning ordinance be adopted. The chairman then put the zoning matter up to the board. A motion of Trustee J. B. Dennis to have a second reading of the ordinance by title started a deal of discussion indulged in by T. H. Lisk, Mrs. Mary Dummage, City Attorney Campbell, the trustees and others. The main objection was to the dividing of blocks into part residence and part business blocks. An objecting communication was also read. The ordinance was adopted as read, and applause from the "gallery" greeted the adoption. The map, which is not part of the ordinance, will be altered to meet objections.

In the course of his remarks on the zoning question, Mr. Lisk invoked the constitution of the United States to conserve his rights. "Why," said he, "that's what the Rebellion was fought for. I will certainly stand up for my rights."

Trustee Dennis again brought up the matter of the indiscriminate dumping of inflammable matter along the Scenic Road, north of Cooke's Cove. The marshal was instructed to stop all such dumping.

An alleged dangerous sidewalk at Ocean avenue and Carmel street was reported by Trustee Dennis. Referred to Trustee Goold. It was stated that it was a perfectly good sidewalk and that the nearby menace could easily be eliminated.

Trustee Larouette was authorized to have six artistic signs painted for display on the ocean beach to warn against unlawful acts.

Well Known Musicians Locate in Monterey

Musicians and students of music on the Peninsula will be interested to know that Bessie Louise Bane, dramatic soprano, and Marion Wayne Richter, pianist, have recently located in the old Stevenson House in Monterey, a place which abounds in romance and memories.

Mrs. Bane is well known in the East, having studied in this country and abroad. She has also received great encouragement and advice from such well known artists as Mme. Emma Calve, Mme. Johanna Gadski, Mme. Olive Fremstad, and is highly endorsed as a teacher by Mrs. M. E. Blanchard and Miss Edith Benjamin of San Francisco.

Mrs. Richter has studied with William J. McCoy and Alma Schmitt Kennedy, and is related to Wager Swayne, the distinguished teacher of Paris. She is well known in the bay cities as a pianist and accompanist, where she has recently given up a large class.

Three Elections in Carmel This Month

The voting franchise will be much exercised in this city this month. Three elections are scheduled. First on the list is the election for three members of the Sanitary Board, which takes place next Monday, March 9.

The other two elections will be a consolidated affair, to take place on the same date, namely, Friday, March 27. The one is an election for Trustee of Sunset School, the other and most important is a proposal for a $50,000 bond issue to build and equip a new school building and to acquire more needed land.

Everything to Tell; Nothing to Sell

"The Circle of Enchantment," a booklet issued by the Monterey Peninsula Communities, Inc., illustrating the beauties of the Peninsula, is ready for distribution.

Numerous requests from all over the country for copies have been received, and are being rapidly mailed out.

The book was edited by the directors of the organization. It is written in good style, giving a summary of the history of Monterey, beauties of the Peninsula, sports, recreations, homes, climate, cities of Pacific Grove and Carmel, contrasting the various communities, and tells just why this is a "Circle of Enchantment."

The book is illustrated by pictures of all historical buildings and landmarks, the Custom House, Robert Louis Stevenson house, scenes at Point Lobos and 17-Mile Drive, view from the Presidio over the bay, gift shops, the golf course, adobe houses, picturesque homes in Carmel and Pacific Grove, and a map of the Peninsula.

Those who wish to obtain a copy of this book may obtain one at the Monterey Chamber of Commerce.

Sardines	4	2	.666
Whales	2	4	.333

Goldfish	1	5	.166

Tomorrow is fraught with possibilities for the Abalone League. Given good weather the embattled teams have a chance to make the standing of the clubs look like a word-picture of fish chowder.

As a result of last week's games the Seals held on to their undisputed lead, but the Sharks and Sardines are knocking at the door. To make tomorrow more interesting, the Seals, to hold their place in the sun, will have to attend to the Sharks in person. The last time this pair met the Sharks gobbled down their fur-bearing brethren. Tal Josselyn is captain of the league leaders and Winsor of the runners-up. They will go to the mat in the second game of tomorrow's triple-header.

Festivities will start at 1 o'clock sharp with the Sandabs lined up against the Sardines, followed by the Shark-Seal argument, and concluding with a contest between the Whales and the Goldfish, who will try to extend their one-game winning streak.

Last Sunday the league set a record by reeling off four games. It was a long session, but moved swiftly after the first contest. The Whale-Shark game that was forced into postponement by rain, Washington's birthday, looked more like a train wreck than a ball game, for the Sharks rolled up a score of 21 to 12.

The batting of the Sharks and especially the hard and timely hitting of Dick Johnson, featured the game. Franklin Murphy of the same team also clicked five out of five. Fred Bechdolt, for the Whales, hit four safeties and two runs out of four times up. Peg Gottfried raced almost to the roof for a sensational catch of a low foul fly.

After disposing of the Whales, the Sharks struck a snag in the last-place Goldfish, who officially joined the league by winning 14 to 13. Up at bat for their last whack, the tail-enders filled the bases and all three runners scored when Van Riper drove a long hit to left. With the count tied, Bob Leidig, who pitched the Fish to their first victory, won his own game with a single. Johnson kept up his stout clouting in the Goldfish game, compiling a record for the afternoon of nine safeties in ten trips to the plate. His hitting was deadly effective behind the rushing attack of the Shark big four, Gottfried, Winsor Josselyn, Dour and Fred Godwin. Harrison Godwin's home run to right field on the first ball pitched was the champion long-distance hit of the day.

In the third game, the Sardines got off to a good start and were never headed by the Whales, who were without the services of Eddie Burns, captain and clean-up hitter. George Aucourt caught a smart game and Fletcher Dutton did some efficient batting. The Sardines presented a rearranged line-up, Dutton going to third and Dooley Stoney playing short.

Tal Josselyn's Seals annexed the final game in workmanlike fashion. The captain was out of the fray, but behind the steady playing of By Ford the league leaders swung along at a good pace and made their hits count for runs. The Seal shortstop, George Ball, the third baseman, and Berkeley, Sandab captain, were the batting leaders. John Turner of the Sandabs laid down two safe bunts that caught the opposition flat-footed. Roslyn Morey combed two hard singles through the Seal infield.

Pipers and a Dancer

This latest book from the pen of Stella Benson is based on the romance of Ipsie, a little artist who is so tire-somely introspective that she loses track of her original self. She stands aside watching her "showman" exhibit her in so many poses that she becomes bewildered. There is no limit to these impersonations. A new one is created to meet every fresh situation.

When she meets Jacob Heming, her lover, she is so child-like and appealing that he pictures her always as a devoted little housewife—his own "Wee Mary." Yet she knows quite well that the real Ipsie is not like that—"the Ipsie who held half the wild world behind her eyes."

With Pauline she acts the role of little sister, although she is inwardly cynical and rebellious. And then, when her rebellion breaks out and she antagonizes Pauline, she feels lost and helpless and wants to win back her strong protective love.

To Rodd Innes, she is whimsical, enigmatic, brave and careless of convention. Then she goes on to annoy him by explaining that these, too, are poses. "He could find nothing but moods in her. Nothing to love but an extravagant and defenseless fallibility."

The real Ipsie is so deeply buried beneath all sorts of artificialities and pretenses that one wants to shake her and tell her for goodness sake to be herself for a while. Especially at the end of the book where she gives up her life to Pauline, whom she inwardly detests, and to the worship of the departed Jacob.

The three best-drawn characters are Jacob Heming, heavy, honest, small-minded—tragically unhappy under his stolid exterior and disliked by everyone without knowing why; Pauline, the domineering, self-righteous spinster who wanted to subjugate everyone into submissive admiration; and Sophie Hinds, the snivelling sentimentalist who wrote uplift stories for magazines.

In her own surprising, lovely way, Stella Benson scatters through her novel such delightful passages as the following description of the Chinese tribes people returning from their festival: "The sun was behind them and they twirled their gay scarlet and yellow umbrellas on long seven-foot stems against the low following light. It seemed that those shining, spinning golden circles blew like bubbles on a slow wind from the sun."

Of the English she says: "Americans see English people always reduced to dumbness on a first introduction; they must think us an oddly inarticulate race. However, I suppose they remember William Shakespeare and Ethel M. Dell and hope for the best."

Again, speaking of death, she is well worth quoting: "People should dissolve like clouds, like the thin shell-white clouds that cross the quiet faces of the mountains and, pleasantly and without pain, cease to exist. It is intolerable that words must be spoken, long sustained poses destroyed, anger created, self-regard torn in shreds, before two people can dissolve before each other's faces."—D. C. H., Woodside Library.

Book for Art Lovers

E. V. Lucas' new book, "A Wanderer Among Pictures," is an illustrated popular companion and facile guide to all the important galleries, large and small, of Europe and London. It is written primarily for that hasty traveler who wants a compendium in one volume together with an index of their locations, of all the paintings he ought to see in Europe, and as many more as he has time for. Very few important paintings or "favorite" masters are omitted and the layman will find his attention called to a great many works well worth his consideration which he generally overlooks because he is unacquainted with them. This is particularly applicable in the case of the Flemish school.

MAKING CIGARS IN HAVANA

By Dorothy Merrell

The building seemed very dark and cool after the heat and sunlight of the street. Tobacco bales were stored in rooms and hallways. Some of the bales were covered with wet blankets to keep them moist and ready for use in the factory.

We saw girls stripping the stems off the tobacco leaves to make it ready for the cigars. They did this very quickly without tearing the leaves, which were moist. Then we went into one of the rooms where the men made cigars.

At a counter a man was measuring out tobacco for the workmen. Each man is given so much tobacco and is paid for the cigars he makes from it. The tobacco is very costly and he does not want it stolen.

This room was very large and long. It was full of tables at which the cigar-makers were seated. There were colored men and Cubans, and some white men. Some of them were chewing tobacco, but I did not see anyone smoking. They wore ragged clothes and were not clean. They did not look educated, but the guide said that they knew about almost everything and could talk on any subject. On one side of the room, on a platform, was a man shouting very loudly to them. I could not understand what he said but the guide said he was reading the morning news, and that he read the latest books and everything interesting that was going on, so that the cigar-makers were really going to school all the time.

There were little pots of glue on the tables and many tobacco leaves. The cigar-maker took a little bunch of the tobacco in his hand and rolled it, and then he cut a tobacco leaf into strips and rolled it onto the cigar and pasted it. I was surprised to see that he could make such a nice cigar so quickly. Every one was the same size, for he measured them on a little board. Then he snipped off the end. He took a little glue and turned the edges of the wrapper into a joint.

In another room we saw them sorting the cigars. These people are paid more than anyone else in the factory. They would take a large bundle of cigars and lay them out in a row, and pick out all of one size and color, and pack them in boxes.

In another room, girls removed the cigars from the boxes and put red and gold bands on them. Each cigar was put back in the box in the same place it came from. The boxes were put in a press.

The factory was a nice clean place with cement floors and high ceilings. It was only a short distance from the beautiful shore drive of Havana, which was built by the Americans. The cigars made in this factory are very costly and suppose they have the best cigar-makers. I saw fancy boxes with a thousand cigars in them. They had drawers with different kinds of cigars in each. They were to go to Europe.—Wee Acorn.

New Road to Pinnacles

The Board of Supervisors of this county visited the Pinnacles recently and made plans for a new road to be constructed for the heavy summer travel which goes through. The place will be surveyed shortly and the road completed before the traffic begins.

The Pinnacles are a massive rock formation a few miles below Soledad. The beautiful construction of these rocks draws many tourists, and for that reason the board deemed it suitable to build a travelable road.

The Cost of Service

ON the loyalty and skill of the humane element depends the character of telephone service. The providers of this service must not only meet the market prices for materials. They must also maintain at any cost a high standard of workmanship.

Because of advancing prices, the telephone dollar goes only half as far as it did ten years ago. More than three-fifths of this dollar is necessarily expended for wages. Less would neither attract nor hold the high-grade workers essential to maintain America's standards.

That Bell telephone rates have advanced much less than other prices is largely due to economies in methods and apparatus that have been developed and introduced. It is also because the proportion of operating plant built at pre-war prices is still large, though this is steadily decreasing because of new construction made necessary by the nation's telephone needs.

Protests Reckless Discharge of Firearms

Following is a copy of letter sent to Board of Supervisors of this county:
February 28, 1925.

Gentlemen:

The writer and his family have a cottage on the point near the mouth of the Carmel River, and located between the homes of Miss Stuart and Mr. Reamer. We have an 11 year old girl in our family and make frequent trips to this cottage from Oakland.

Although our property is not located within the city limits of Carmel, the district in which the cottage is located is becoming more thickly populated each year. Furthermore, at all times, there are walkers, automobilists, picnic parties in the vicinity of our cottage.

Recently we have had considerable trouble with persons in the vicinity of our cottage, discharging rifles and other fire arms. Last week when we were down there, there were two occasions when rifles were being discharged on portions of the beach and around rocks which are usually occupied with children and adults watching the sea, playing, and picnicking. The firing which we have observed has not been in connection with any hunting.

We feel that it would be a very proper exercise of the authority of your board if you would pass an ordinance making it a misdemeanor to discharge firearms in the locality mentioned. This type of shooting is becoming more dangerous each year and sooner or later there is going to be a serious accident by reason of this practice. May I, therefore, take this opportunity of suggesting an ordinance which would prevent the discharge of firearms in the territory between the highway leading to Carmel Highlands and the Pacific Ocean, and between the town of Carmel and the Carmel River. I would be pleased to know how your board feels upon this subject and to discuss the matter with some of the members of your board on one of my many trips through Salinas on the way to Carmel.

Yours truly,
DAVID D. OLIPHANT, Jr.

JUST KIDDING

Being the Semi-Serious Musings of Carmel's
Own Sam Pepys

IT MAY BE of more than passing interest to the world at large and to some Carmeloans in particular for us to relate the whys and wherefores of our coming to this vicinage. The story is not long, nor too painful. To begin with, there was a honeymoon on the shores of glorious Tahoe. Two dogs, one wife, an asthmatic Chevrolet, a wilderness of pines and tamaracks, trout boiled on fire-bark coals, snappy nights, crystal waters, no crabby neighbors—in fact no neighbors nearer than a mile—and only fifty-five miles of mountain road separating us from the only port in the world where the tied flow in and the untied flow out. We bathed and boated to our hearts' content. Around huge bonfires, to the music of our Portable, we danced on pine-needles and made merry in our humble way. Every fortnight or so we braved the mountain road to Reno, for a change sometimes, and now and then for supplies.

OFTEN ON the return journey to camp we had mishaps, and always the demijohns and supplies rattled fearfully. Once we ran over a porcupine. A new and costly hat of the bride's was blown off and into the depths of a canyon a half a mile deep. So passed the summer, our Airedales running wild and free and breaking nary a lily, our good selves happy and fit for the Main Event. But one thing troubled us. We owed Charley Field of Sunset Magazine a story. He'd paid us in advance—$500—and we had to make good before the end of the year. The theme for a good yarn occurred to us, and for a week we wrestled with our plot outline and characters. Day after day our Corona rattled, and night after night we read it over and chuckled it into the fire. It was pap. It was junk of the most miserable description. Labor Day arrived, and with it the genesis of a sound and fresh theme for the story. Feverishly we set to work, for the mating season had arrived, and a visiting buckaroo had turned six Nevada bulls loose among the cows in our woodland pasture. Also the first snows were due at any time.

WE TURNED OUT fiction, and good stuff, too. There were interruptions. Wildcats and coyotes prowled and yelped by night, but interfered not with the grinding of the fiction mill. Not so with the bulls by day. They sniffed around camp and made faces at the bride. They pursued the cows, or else the cows pursued them, across our tent ropes and guys, around our Chevrolet and through our kitchen. It was hell to break right off in the midst of a beautiful paragraph to yip! yip! at the cows and their gentlemen friends who were so careless about their spooning.

WITH THE STORY practically finished, and with the leaves of manuscript weighted to the table, we broke off one day to take a swim. With the two Airedales and the one wife we put in an hour, when clouds and a rising wind drove us three hundred feet to camp. Two or three pages of manuscript met us part way. We feared the worst. And it was even so. Our camp was a cow-camp, a place of bulls and their ladies. With no respect for Funk & Wagnall's product, or our nearly completed yarn, the cattle had overturned the table and made it a holiday. The story? Ask the Lake, the wind which grew in force even as we stooped to retrieve the Corona. For a space we cursed and heaved stones at cattle of both sexes. We found a magenta-and-cream heifer half way in our tent licking at the bride's cold cream. The bigger Airedale tasted veal that afternoon. The smaller one chased bulls until dark. And to make the affair thoroughly enjoyable we must report that it snowed half through the night. Two inches of snow covered the pine-needles in the morning, and we woke the bride by playing "What'll I do?" on the Portable.

SHE'S A GOOD SPORT. "Let's go to Carmel," she proposed, one eye on the snow, the other eye open for returning bulls. And so we packed the old Chevy and beat it over the Summit. Hat in hand, in San Francisco, we entered the Sunset Magazine premises, ready to say, "Charlie, let's make it seven hundred and I'll give you a better story." But alas! Mr. Charles K. Field had left for Paris and other villages. And the treasurer knew us not beyond $25. And so we came to Carmel.

ON THE EVE of a Sabbath in October we parked near the bath-house at Carmel, and spread our blankets on the sand. No policeman annoyed us, no neighbor complained. The bright sun called us early, and we awakened to the screaming of the gulls and a man in knickerbockers reading poetry aloud while seated on a sand-dune nearby. A girl munching a sandwich, her eyes turned seaward, all but stepped on our right hand as she headed for the beach. We arose, made coffee and shaved. The bride sat erect in her blankets and wondered if it were correct to smoke so publicly. And then, lo! and behold, two grand dames with silvery hair passed close by, one of them rolling granulated tobacco into brown paper, the other drawing comfort from a dainty tube of Russian appearance. They deigned not a glance in our direction as we sipped and smoked. No policeman interfered.

FOR WE WERE on the beach—at Carmel.

SPEAKING OF POLICEMEN, we desire it known that we are humble and honest folk who obey the laws insofar as humanly possible, although in our unregenerate days we've been 'most everywhere and been 'most everything EXCEPT a policeman. We didn't balk at becoming an undertaker's assistant in Dallas, or wiping dishes in a Chink restaurant in Helena, but somehow our ambition pinched-out short of "go in' on the cops." We confess we believe we'd a shade rather be a burglar. Or perhaps a contributor to TRUE AND SMUTTY STORIES.

HEARD ON THE MAIN DRAG

Court, the Head Barber, is thinking of putting in a manicure this summer if he can engage one thin enough so's she won't take up too much room. And he's figuring on having a bay window put in where his Kansas man can sit between shaves and turn out manzanita root pipes for the tourist trade. Next!

Two police dogs mixed it up amongst John Jordan's freshly planted bulbs one evening not long ago. J. J. says the bulbs cost a heap of money and that the Pine Inn grounds were landscaped for other purposes.

A low bridge party was held at the cozy home of Mrs. Ramon Gutierrez in the Eighty Acres tract last Wednesday evening. Dainty refreshments were served, and a pleasant time was had by all. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Julio Mendez, Mr. and Mrs. Jose Miranda y Sabinal, the Misses Concha and Mercedes Alvarez, and Mr. Frederico Lagartijo.

Four Little Foxes

By Lew Starett

Speak gently, Spring, and make no sudden sound;
For in my windy valley yesterday I found
Newborn foxes squirming on the ground—

Speak gently.

Walk softly, March, forbear the bitter blow.
Her feet within a trap, her blood upon the snow,
The four little foxes saw their mother go—

Walk softly.

Go lightly, Spring, oh, give them no alarm;
As I covered them with boughs to shelter them from harm.
The thin blue foxes suckled at my arm—

Go lightly.

Step softly, March, with your rampant hurricane;
Nuzzling one another, and whimpering with pain,
The new little foxes are shivering in the rain—

Step softly.

Proposed Legislation

The Committee on Legislation of the State Humane Association held several meetings in December. Several bills were drafted after consultation with Attorney John A. Percy and T. C. Judkins.

Bills considered covered the following subjects: Humane education, protecting dogs on running boards of autos, correcting error in Section 1208, Code of Civil Procedure, relating to liens on animals; providing compensation for humane societies, limiting societies to one in each city, prohibiting coursing of live hares.

Chairman McCurrie and H. J. Baldwin of the committee went to Sacramento and had all the above bills introduced except the humane education bill and the one protecting dogs on running boards of autos. These bills had already been introduced and the authors will probably amend their bills to conform with the draft we prepared.

A number of other bills had been suggested but the committee desired to request as few bills to be introduced as possible.

Societies will be kept informed as to the progress of the bills after the second session convenes.—Our Animals, S. F.

COMMUNITY INTEREST

Figure as you will, you can't get away from the idea of community interest. We who constitute the local community are intensely dependent on one another. When we buy our merchandise from out-of-town concerns, we take that much business away from local business firms. If enough business is withdrawn from them, they'll eventually have to quit. Then Carmel would shrivel up. Clerks, laborers, tradesmen, artists and writers would move away. That would directly affect the value of our homes and business concerns. Then, who would pay the taxes that support our public institutions, build and maintain our streets and roads and pay the interest on public indebtedness already incurred? Our self-interest, the safety of our property investments demand that we trade at home and support our local business man.

VALUE OF ADVERTISING

While advertising has helped millions of firms to greater efficiency, it has also raised the standards of business. It is the word of the house to the customer. Manufacturers and distributors realize that readers must receive exactly what is promised in advertised products. No man of experience will put his name or brand on inferior articles, because it is plain business suicide to advertise an inferior product. Hundreds of successful businesses have grown from a good idea, nurtured with advertising. Advertising attracts new customers, broadens the market and quality and brings repeat orders. That is why advertising flourishes.

HOW CONFIDENCE HELPS

To have confidence in another man's square dealing is good evidence that you practice square dealing yourself. Lack of confidence has kept thousands of good men in the background and they are standing in the rear today, watching their more confident and aggressive fellow workers succeed. If you have faith in yourself and in your ability, others will have faith in you. Nothing can stop you if you know how to create the confidence of your fellows.

If you are an employer you needn't expect complete efficiency in your help if you are unable to establish their confidence in you. You have to prove to them by your personal and business acts, every day, that you are to be trusted. Then you will have a business organization to be proud of, for your employees cannot help being benefited by daily contact with a man who is four-square in everything he does and says.

If a business man has self-reliance he can inspire everybody about him with self-reliance. Confidence is catching, and a wholesome bond is made only when men have confidence in each other, whether as private individuals or responsible representatives of a business. There cannot be two standards. There is such a thing, of course, as over-confidence, but its real name is bad judgment.

Nothing is more certain to destroy the good feeling that may be cherished towards you than to show distrust. On the contrary, confidence leads people naturally to act kindly, fairly, to trust and be trusted.
